

Climate change

The luminaries of the IPCC (Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change) have been saying since 1988, that a maximum global warming of 1.5°C must be maintained, if one does not want to irreversibly damage the climate.

The following graph shows, that we in Switzerland have already exceeded this limit by twice as much as 3.0°C in 2025. Now it's the year 2026, where one heat wave chases the other and our shitty politicians still haven't figured out what's going on. After all, the former brain amputee minister Uli Maurer of the right-wing extremist populist SVP said: Be grateful and happy, that it is finally getting warmer. Then you don't have to jet off to the Caribbean for hours during your beach holidays.

Other losers like Donald Trump even deny global warming!

According to the World Health Organization (WHO), it is estimated that around 500,000 people die worldwide every year as a result of extreme heat. In the Far East, it looks like the picture on the right in the cities, split air conditioners again and again, which cool inside, but blow 1.5 times the heat to the outside and thus drive up the global warming even more.

It is therefore quite easy to foresee that in Switzerland it will look just as crappy in cities like Zurich, Basel, Bern, Lausanne and Geneva within a short time.

Donald Trump, the miserable loser, thinks the whole world must accept his tariffs and kiss him on the ass as a thank you, which in the case of China went into the shitty pants. And Canada stands up to this America First asshole and has imposed counter-tariffs of 50%. Midterm elections on November 3, 2026 show, that he will lose the majority in both chambers and therefore totally freak out. The hoped-for Nobel Peace Prize also failed to materialize, which is why he called Norway a shitty country.

And what is Switzerland doing? Instead of backbone, our ministers there have only yielded rubber hoses and cuddling.
